

Two Truths and a Lie Worst Holiday Season Gifts

Have each guest write down two of the worst gifts they have received during the holiday season along with a made up worst holiday gift. Make sure each person writes their name at the top of the paper (be sure NOT to indicate which gift was truth and which was a lie).

Hang each guests completed paper in a visible area. Throughout the evening guests can review the lists and write a check mark next to which item they believe is the lie. At the end of the evening have a special recognition for any player who was able to stump the party with a really horrible “true” gift!

Supplies:

- One piece of paper for each person playing the game
- Tape
- Paper and Pencils

Marshmallow Igloo Holiday Group Activity

In this holiday team building exercise, small groups can construct igloos out of marshmallows. For the igloo group project, use a large cardboard cut into a circle and covered with aluminum foil as the base. Then, have the participants work together to build a large round circle with marshmallows.

Keep placing layers of marshmallows on top of one another, and glue together with royal icing (similar to the frosting used to build a gingerbread house) until the igloo walls are finished.

Leave a space for the igloo door.

Use toothpicks to stabilize it, if necessary.

Supplies:

- Cardboard circle cover in foil
- Marshmallows
- Glue
- Toothpicks
- Sprinkles and other decorative supplies

Charity Challenges

What could be more rewarding for your team and the community than choosing a Charity Challenge for your next teambuilding activity?

To enhance the event, Team Building Unlimited adds an element of competition and teambuilding into each of the Challenges. Enter into the Season of Giving-Year Round.

Everyone is a Winner in this Philanthropic Teambuilding Activity!

Charity Challenges are great for Community Service Days, Meeting or Conference, Celebration or Holiday Party
